7:45 Adjournment

So what am I going to do? I am going to keep reading and writing about such issues, I am going to gather the next generation of teacher educators around and read along with them, argue with them, and learn with and from them. We will read current research and historical accounts, we will review syllabi from courses and plan new ones, and we will critically examine the practices I use to support their learning as researchers and teachers. I would hope these efforts would deepen their knowledge of teacher education, broaden their methodological repertoires, and whet their appetites for internal and external criticism. I know they will mine.
